

Bring APA Courses Home to Your Chapter

BY SUSAN S. GARCIA

Why not let APA come to you? APA has the perfect solution for those chapters and businesses that are not in cities where payroll courses are offered—our In-House Education program.

Groups like the Northern Lights Alaska Chapter (NLAC), with more than 165 members in the state, have been able to take advantage of in-house training to serve their members.

“Alaska is the largest state in the nation with our population being vastly spread out, which makes providing our membership with educational opportunities a challenge,” said Dee Nelson, CPP. “APA in-house training lets us provide quality, up-to-date payroll education to our chapter members and payroll professionals. And they get it at home, from the experts, without leaving our state.”

In-house training is not only a convenient educational solution, it's an economical solution. You can eliminate travel and lodging costs by hosting an APA in-house seminar.

“Travel can be quite expensive,” said Dee. “By bringing APA training to Alaska, we can ensure that our members get the best of the best.”

APA in-house seminars also open the door for networking, chapter growth opportunities, and more member involvement. Dee said the NLAC uses in-house training to get individuals more engaged.

“We allow our membership to choose two classes each year from the wide selection that APA offers, and we bring them to Alaska,” Dee explained. “The choice is up to them, and we love that we have these choices.”

You can choose from any of APA's one-day or multiple-day seminars for in-house education. For a complete list, visit www.americanpayroll.org and click on the “Courses & Conferences” tab, then select “In-House Education.”

One-day classes require a minimum of 11 attendees, while multi-day classes need a minimum of eight. Pricing is quoted per participant, with a significant discount over standard membership pricing. The instructor, the instructor's travel and expenses, and all course materials are included in the fees. The chapter needs only to provide the meeting venue and any refreshments.
